NEW YORK—American lighting brand Roll & Hill will return this year to Salone Internazionale del Mobile, the world's foremost design event, to launch two new products: Gridlock by Philippe Malouin, and Fiddlehead by Jason Miller. The company, which is planning to release a major new collection in May 2014 at New York's ICFE, will preview the first two of the products lines at Spazio Pontaccio (via Pontaccio 18) in Milan's Brera neighborhood. The products will be on view beginning Wednesday, April 9th.

Gridlock is the first product to be introduced from a new collaboration with London-based designer Philippe Malouin. Gridlock is a series of lamps made from thousands of tiny brass tubes, built to form a lattice-like structure, which diffuses light. The Gridlock 7440 pendant, which will be shown at Spazio Pontaccio, comprises more than 10,000 individual brass parts.

Jason Miller's newest design, Fiddlehead, derives its form and name from budding ferns. Crafted from plated steel and hand blown glass, this series of cantilevered, hanging, and wall lamps delicately cup a glass globe at the end of a long, furled arm.
